

TotalInformation lets subject matter experts create, manage and deliver compelling learning content that ties directly to the web. With the ability to tailor to your organization's needs, content is published to a self-service web environment to provide context-driven, personalized delivery.

Accelerate sales force readiness

- Ramp up a new sales force in less time, and accelerate time to revenue when launching new products

Increase channel communication and sales

- Provide your partners with ready access to the information they need to close business
- Attract and retain partners by providing unmatched training, access to information and sales tools

Leverage company experts

- Subject matter experts can easily post and update content in a variety of formats
- Publish learning modules from commonly used applications like Dreamweaver, Microsoft PowerPoint and Microsoft Word
- Centralized publishing environment enable designated publishers to efficiently organize content and manage user access based on user profiles

Enhance customer service

- Retain and grow your customer base by giving the right information to support staff for superior assistance and leverage cross-selling opportunities
- Ensure data delivery and consumption by individuals, teams or companies

Intuitive portal interface

- Browser-based navigational environment that provides the learner's personalized view of content
- Users publish only to areas to which they have permission to maintain content structure and integrity

Increase productivity

- Reduce delay and expense of using instructional course designers when not needed
- Improve quality with user feedback and assessment loops

For more information, please contact us at +1 650 934 9500, or at toll-free +1 866 768 6825, or via email at sales@sumtotalsystems.com.